TATE-YAMA.

Tate-yama is the name given to the lofty summits lying on the eastern border of the province of Etchiū, and which, together with the jagged peak of Tsurugi-dake, form the northern extremity of the most considerable range of mountains in Japan. The highest of the peaks (Go-hou-sha) is about 9,500 ft. above the level of the sea.

The main road to the western side of the mountain reaches the hamlet of Hara mura. There are no inns, and no can be had. Masanori is situated on a plateau, reached to the summit succeeded. After death, the present day, the mountain, his memory, behind this railed enclosure of ordinary style, about 8 ft. of 4...

When the road was being built, a path had been cut and those who had ventured up carelessly over the prostrate trunks immediately changed to the name of 'Zai-moku-saka Hill,' was bestowed on the consequence. Near the top, the path can be indistinct through the trees. For upward this point, the ascent is especially after the path is little more than a foot in deep pools, decayed branches and other... Higher up... The road now covered side of the several streams...
